Joseph Garriguets, Founder and Editorial Director of Global Finance, talks to Sohail Sultan, Chairman, iibGroup, about the bank's wide-ranging sustainability initiatives and how they have shaped the institution's identity and culture.

Committed to serving as a sustainability leader in the community, iib's sustainability initiatives span multiple sectors. In healthcare, for example, the bank has run blood donation campaigns and supported oncology services. iib's educational programmes include partnering with the British Foreign Office to sponsor post-graduates for UK education as well as sponsoring technology upgrades and providing digital media solutions for corporate employees.

For the environment, iib has led numerous programs that preserve and protect natural spaces and reduce the carbon footprint, including mangrove restoration tobacco clean-ups and tree planting.

Financial inclusion is another key driver for iib. Across East Africa, the bank conducts grassroots campaigns on responsible saving and borrowing, while also providing access to credit. Digital-first products are part of the offering in a bid to make banking affordable and accessible in underserved communities.

iib also leverages its role as an intermediary to drive green and blue financing in emerging markets – for renewable energy and low-carbon infrastructure via green bonds, and ocean conservation and coastal resilience via blue bonds. To further connect international capital

Sohail Sultan: A Visionary Financial Leader
Committed to Social Impact

A desire to do good and contribute meaningfully to the market is an important trait of any leader. Financial leaders maintain a close relationship with institutions and effectively work with them on financing arrangements directed toward projects having a meaningful social impact. Sohail Sultan is one such financial leader who works closely with a lot of financial institutions in Europe and North America. As the CEO of ibGroup Holdings WLL, he maintains standards that are consistent with the highest international regulatory standards.

Sultan's journey began at Citibank in the early 1990s, an experience that would lay the foundation for his diverse global career in finance. After stints at institutions like Barclays Capital, his entrepreneurial spirit led him to the Middle East and South Asia, where he focused on private equity and financial institutions.

One of his most ambitious undertakings was leading the management buy-in of a bank in Bahrain, though unforeseen challenges derailed the effort. Undeterred, Sultan formed ibGroup Holdings, an investors holding company headquartered in Bahrain with a focus on emerging market banking, particularly in East and West

Effective leaders are propelled into motion by their failures – not paralyzed by them.

A. Hadi Chaudhry

The Interview

What helped you most on your journey to becoming CEO of a public company?

The long, winding journey started two decades ago with a bachelor's degree and an off-manager position at MDC from which CareCloud emerged, no success came without the full share of struggles, during the way, I took risks and moved away from my comfort zone. This allowed me to experiment and critically analyze and then learn what to achieve positive outcomes.

Hard work and integrity are the main traits that helped me succeed, whether I was the general manager, chief information officer, or president. Throughout my career, I've had the privilege to work alongside great IT industry leaders who helped pave the path to my current position.

Emerging Trends that are relevant to CareCloud and healthcare technology?

The pandemic changed the face of healthcare technology.

It forced the industry to accelerate technological advancements in digital solutions, and what has previously been considered a sector-only field has now transformed into a tech-innovated industry.

Additionally, U.S. regulatory bodies have written and modified many regulations. One of the healthcare IT industry's most significant trends is the change in care and reimbursement models.

The Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS), a federal agency within the United States Department of Health and Human Services, recently released the final "Payment" rule that will significantly impact reimbursement to providers for virtual care services through the end of 2023.

As doctors continue to cope with virtual consultations, the U.S. will transition to a value-based care model by reducing costs associated with travel and unnecessary in-person visits. Instead of getting paid using a fee-for-service approach, healthcare providers are paid based on how much they improve a patient's quality of life.

Aside from hybrid care systems, including telehealth and remote patient monitoring, the incorporation of artificial intelligence (AI) is another positive future trend. Healthcare providers can make smarter decisions faster by using AI to analyze symptoms, suggest treatments, and predict risks.
